In denying a decree of divorce in the case of Bertha Shults vs. Jacob Shults, Judge Blair, in a written opinion handed down in common pleas court Saturday morning, took occasion to severely censure both the plaintiff and the defendant.

Judge Blair states that the defendant was guilty of striking and kicking the plaintiff, yet the plaintiff was guilty of even more reprehensible and far-reaching acts.

The court in his opinion stated that Mrs. Shults permitted her daughters, 14 and 15 years of age, to keep company with men much older than they and that they attended public dances and remained out at nights until 1 o'clock. On one occasion, in returning from a dance, they were so boisterous that it awakened the neighbors. The court further stated that the plaintiff also went to public dances and allowed her four children to remain in the house uncared for.

Judge Blair states in his opinion that if the plaintiff and defendant do not "reform" he will direct the prosecuting attorney to bring the case to the attention of the juvenile court.

The decree of divorce was denied by the court.

Many cows are really capable of a greatly increased milk yield but do not get their best through a chronic sluggishness of the digestive organs. Such cows need a medicine—just as human beings occasionally need medicines.

Kow-Kure is a scientific cow medicine, which has a direct and lasting tonic effect on the organs of digestion. For over twenty years it has been the standard medicine for the prevention and treatment of such common cow ailments as Abortion, Retained Afterbirth, Barrenness, Milk Fever, Scouring, and Lost Appetite. You cannot afford to let a cow get down in health. Better keep Kow-Kure constantly on hand.
